

THE NEWBERRY HERALD.

WEDNESDAY MORNING, JULY 18, 1866.

A GRAND BARBECUE

WILL be given on Wednesday, the 25th July, instant, at Academy Grove, in the suburbs of the Town of Newberry, by Messrs. Hunter & Birge. The best cooks will be engaged, and the tables bountifully supplied with the choicest viands that this and other markets can afford. The most savory meats, poultry, etc., will be dressed a la mode, and vegetables and pastry served in every style. Fruits, breads, confections, &c., shall be abundant, while the most delicious and cooling beverages, such as ice cream, iced lemonade, sherbet, pop, mead, and champagne, wine, etc., on ice, will gush in sparkling rills from silvery fountains and 'glassy goose necks,' under the canopy of shady bowers. Ladies and gentlemen, who know how to cater to the satisfaction, comfort and pleasure of others, will preside at the tables. The citizens of the surrounding country of Edgefield, Laurens, &c., are invited to this festival. The only object of which is an interchange of the pleasures of social life. The crops will be put by, and the season an appropriate one for a little festive jollity and innocent mirth. Come one and all to the feast of good things, and bring your mothers, wives, sisters and 'sweethearts' to grace the occasion with their beauty and smiles. Tickets to dinner will be only $1. Refreshments extra. JNO. BIRGE, July 4 3. J. Y. HUNTER.

The Philadelphia Convention.

The Philadelphia Age says: We are inclined to regard the project of a National Convention in August with more favor than seems to be extended to it by some of our party friends, and it is due to candor and fair dealing that we should say why. No one will for a moment imagine that we have the faintest wish or hope for the disorganization or modification of the great party to which we belong, either locally, where it is complete, or nationally, where it soon will be. But with this unwavering fidelity is entirely consistent a desire to see agencies outside the Democratic party, which indirectly may promote the maintenance and reassertions of the principles, which if even the republic rights, must be reasserted. A National Convention of any kind likely to assemble, must be important and an imposing body—as, being the first body in which for five, or indeed six years, the Southern States have been represented. Their presence here, after all this frightful war and bloodshed, after this rupture of all ties, social, ecclesiastical, political, will be picturesque. It is worse than idle to underrate the importance of such a council or such an event. Our opponents feel this, and hence their studious efforts to disparage it. This, too, seems to be the idea of some of our New York friends. For ourselves, seeing no harm and much probable good in it, we do not hesitate to say, that the consummation in this initiatory plan of restoration, or reconstruction, or reassociation, will be matter to us, as Democrats, of sincere rejoicing, and the Radicals may think and say exactly what they please about this clear and frank expression of our views. The heathens will rage anyhow.

We favor this Convention. There is nothing or little in what we may describe as its preliminary platform that repels us. The Convention implies no derangement of the political organization to which we belong, and are proud to belong. Indeed, it strengthens it. Let it meet. Let every Congressional district of the North be represented, and then let it, as it certainly will, give a grand example to Congress, in session or out of session, of admitting representatives from all the Southern States, and deliberating with them, their ancient friends, their brethren yet. Let them admit them with generous confidence and without the wretched conscience-traps of oaths of abjuration and supremacy. Thus deliberating, we doubt not of the result in theory and practice. The sight of the Southern men in council with the North as equals will invigorate the truly national spirit everywhere. Philadelphia in 1866 will be as Philadelphia in 1787. Christ Church bells will ring as they used long ago to do, not for bloody victories in a civil war, but for the new creation of a nation and the resurrection of a Federal Union. Practically, a Convention thus animated and thus deliberating, will, for the machinery by which its patriotic designs are to be carried into effect, rely mainly, though not of necessity exclusively, on the great and compact organization of the State Right Democracy, now as ever the true supporters of the Union. Hence we wish the Convention success.

MINCE MEAT.—A man was found dead on the levee at Louisville, on the 23d, with one hundred and ten stabs in his body. His ears were cut off, both eyes were torn out and the body was otherwise frightfully mutilated. The case is involved in much mystery. The body is not yet identified.

Governor Patton, in his late letter to Congress, makes the startling announcement that there are fully twenty thousand widows and sixty thousand orphans (whites) in Alabama, and three-fourths of them are destitute.

Prentice says that the Southern States are better represented in Congress now than some of the Northern States, for the reason that non-representation is better than misrepresentation. This is literally and rigidly true.

GEORGETOWN RAILROAD.—The citizens of Georgetown have determined to subscribe $100,000 to the Georgetown Railroad. Well done!
